GENERAL OFFICE AND FACTORIES AT WALLINGFORD, CONNECTICUT

EXTERIOR things are often symbolical of those hidden things from which spring enterprise, ideals and achievement. True, Wallace Silverware is manufactured, in the sense that it is allied to dies and tools and the machinery of trade; but it is also created from the inner dream of the inspired artist and modeled by the cunning handiwork of the craftsman.

The Wallace abode of effort represents work associated with beauty, and all true beauty rests upon loving, earnest labor. So the Wallace office and factories in their beautiful, natural setting of foliage, land and stream, and the orderliness of the interior, express the spirit of accomplishment, allied to the art of the silversmith, that has kept the Wallace standard of quality and integrity unexcelled down through the years. And the guest in the home of Wallace Silverware will see reflected in the faces of all Wallace employees, from those in the humblest capacity to the chief executives, that quiet spirit of daily work being well and happily done which is the living token of a justly earned pride in the product manufactured and in the factory where it is accomplished.

Foreword

THE Wallace catalogue is a treasure house of information for you, a constant reminder and convenience to assist the sale of Wallace Sterling Silver Flatware, Hollow Ware, Toilet Ware and Novelties.

In it you will possess a ready reference by illustration and description of our complete lines, all carefully indexed, their appeal in design and variety, their extensiveness, their exact measurements, and all details that will help you define the need of your clientele and the upbuilding of your Wallace trade.

And this catalogue will also be a revelation to you of Wallace co-operation. We have made that word significant by the addition of many beautiful numbers which portray the advancement of the silversmith's craft in harmony with modern culture and taste.

It is almost superfluous to reiterate our appreciation of your faith and confidence in Wallace quality which have helped us to win a national approval for the Wallace product.

This catalogue is a token of our desire to further cooperate with you, inasmuch as it portrays the ability of our Advertising Department to create sales plans for your store, to provide many useful and original aids and suggestions, to work for you by those ways and means which our experience in combination with your own may dictate for our mutual advantage.

The working ability of any unit of the Wallace organization is yours upon request.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TROPHY

THE trophy shown on this page was made for the Grand Commandery, Knights Templars of the United States. The cup was awarded the best-drilled company in the United States at the Triennial Conclave of the Knights in Los Angeles. It weighs 161 ounces and is a most artistic piece of work.

The cup stands 27 inches high, and with a base of 6 inches attains a height of 33 inches. The pedestal is engraved with three shields, alternating with three swords entwined with laurels and holding at their points crowns of thorns, emblematical of atonement and penitence. Just above the pedestal are three Corinthian columns, gently sloping inward so that the whole cup gains a sense of architectural strength and constructive beauty. The Trinity of threes prevails in all the symbols. In the panels between are crossed swords and the words: Justice, Fortitude and Mercy. Above the three words denoting the quality of the swords are the three words, the bulwark of the order: Wisdom, Strength and Beauty. The Corinthian columns and the panels between form the central part of the cup.

The eight-pointed cross of the Templars, with the motto "In Hoc Signo Vinces," is inserted in three panels above the Corinthian columns, and around the cup at the top is the motto engraven in larger letters. The twelve apostles' shields, engraved around the cover, are surrounded with graceful scroll work, and the whole is surmounted by a 4-inch solid silver Knight Templar in full armor. A peculiarly delicate fact in regard to the designing of the Templar is indicated by the position of his sword and shield. The shield is standing girded to his wrist and in front of him. One edge touches the armored coat and the other the sword held in the right hand, and standing upright in front. By this means the cup and cover can be handled frequently, without the hand meeting any sharp edges or causing any destruction of the cup.

The main feature is undoubtedly the supporting three columns in the central part, standing 18 inches high. The cup, massive as it is, possesses a harmony of parts and architectural strength sufficient to permit its construction in stone instead of silver, and its position on a mount as a monument instead of in a conclave hall as a parchment holder. The cover, when taken off, discloses the hollow interior of the cup, 18 inches deep, into which the charter or other valuable document of the commandery winning it could be placed.

Serving Table De Luxe

THE new R. Wallace Serving Table De Luxe is not only a serving table, but a silver cabinet as well, and can undergo a complete metamorphosis as the occasion demands. One moment it is a beautiful mahogany serving table; the next, a convenient, commodious silver chest. But so skilfully executed in workmanship and design is this latest R. Wallace triumph that even after the most searching scrutiny one would never dream that within an unusually artistic and innocent exterior there lay concealed, in four neatly arranged purple velvet lined drawers, 168 pieces of flat silver in any one of the many handsome Wallace patterns.

The transformation is as simple to accomplish as it is effective when accomplished. The four drawers are merely shut and a mahogany drop-front closed over them and caught by an invisible lock, which is operated from an entrance beneath the table.

It then presents the appearance of, and actually is, a solid mahogany serving table of the Sheraton period. The amount of thought and time devoted to every detail of this table can be appreciated only by judging the exquisite perfection of the finished product. Each table is the result of expert hand workmanship, which permits of a greater beauty and refinement of line and finish than if turned out in lots. Throughout it is characterized by the same faultless, flawless grace of execution and design that have made the silver it contains so universally admired. One can hardly conceive of a more ideal and appropriate wedding gift.

Though this table was originally made in accordance with the style of the Sheraton period, it can be furnished to harmonize with the style of any period at a slightly increased cost. For complete detail and price of Serving Table De Luxe, with contents, see opposite page.
